Our experience, appetite for innovation and long-standing commitment to the academic community makes us the partner of choice in achieving excellence in higher education learning outcomes.

Cambridge University Press is empowering the higher education community with learning solutions.

Not-For-Profit

Our unique position as a university press means that we can dedicate our resources to creating high-quality learning materials for affordable prices.

Personable

We combine the wisdom of our experience with an appetite for innovation. We are friendly, approachable, inclusive, and dedicated to education.

Choice

We develop a diverse range of high-quality, innovative and accessible learning and teaching resources that support the higher education community in today's rapidly changing educational environment.

Accessibility and Learning Solutions

Higher Education professionals and students are able to access Cambridge University Press learning materials through different sources.

We are proud to support individuals and institutions with a market-driven range of print and online purchasing models developed in house and with key partners.

Educational e-Book Distributors

We work with e-book partners in order to provide reliable and accessible textbooks for both institutional and individual purchase. Globally, we have a partnership with VitalSource.

In North America, we work with Redshelf, Unizin, and Perusall. In Europe and the UK, we work with Kortext.

Inclusive Access

When institutions implement inclusive access programmes, we listen. We want to be able to provide flexible learning opportunities to institutions, their instructors and importantly, their students. We will be working on a course-by-course basis to offer this model to institutions applying this model to their classes.

In North America, we are partnering with VitalSource, RedShelf, and Unizin to provide these inclusive access opportunities.

A New Home for Textbooks

Higher Education from Cambridge University Press, launching late summer 2020, will be our new home for textbooks. Created specifically for students, instructors, and institutions of today, the new site combines the convenience of online institutional access to textbooks, with improved functionality to support individual students and instructor's online learning.
